

Innovating food waste management with CGI Waste Manager

Reduce food waste, save production costs and address environmental challenges with CGI Waste Manager.

Enhancing operations to minimize food waste

Approximately 25% of food is disposed of annually by catering services, resulting in significant costs and environmental impacts. In professional kitchens, time is a persistent challenge, so minimizing food waste may not be a priority that is immediately addressed.

To reduce food waste, an efficient tool with information on the causes and amount of disposed food and steps to manage kitchen operations is essential.

Generating in-depth analysis on food waste

CGI Waste Manager is an easy-to-use and customizable real-time monitoring application that stores data in the cloud. It provides historical information that shows how waste occurs and where it is usually generated the most. Through an intuitive user interface, kitchen staff can efficiently:

- Record and classify accumulated food waste by specific food types
- Use the entered data and create visual analyses on the amount of waste, its origin and causes

Our experts coach kitchen staff on how to interpret these charts and act upon them to minimize food waste. They also are trained to use the Lean management model to encourage shared responsibility in kitchen operations.

With CGI Waste Manager, food service providers have reduced food waste by half and saved up to 9% in raw material costs. It also has enabled food service providers to help the environment and promote their corporate social responsibility efforts.
